Cali vs Medellin.

The two sons of the Cali and Medellin cartel's sit down for the first time in history, be a part of this once in a lifetime opportunity.

This infamous meeting will be negotiated by ex-New York mafia boss Michael Franzese.

Hear untold stories and revelations, hold onto your seats as these two figures go head-to-head for the first time publicly.

Destruction.

Cali.

Medellin.

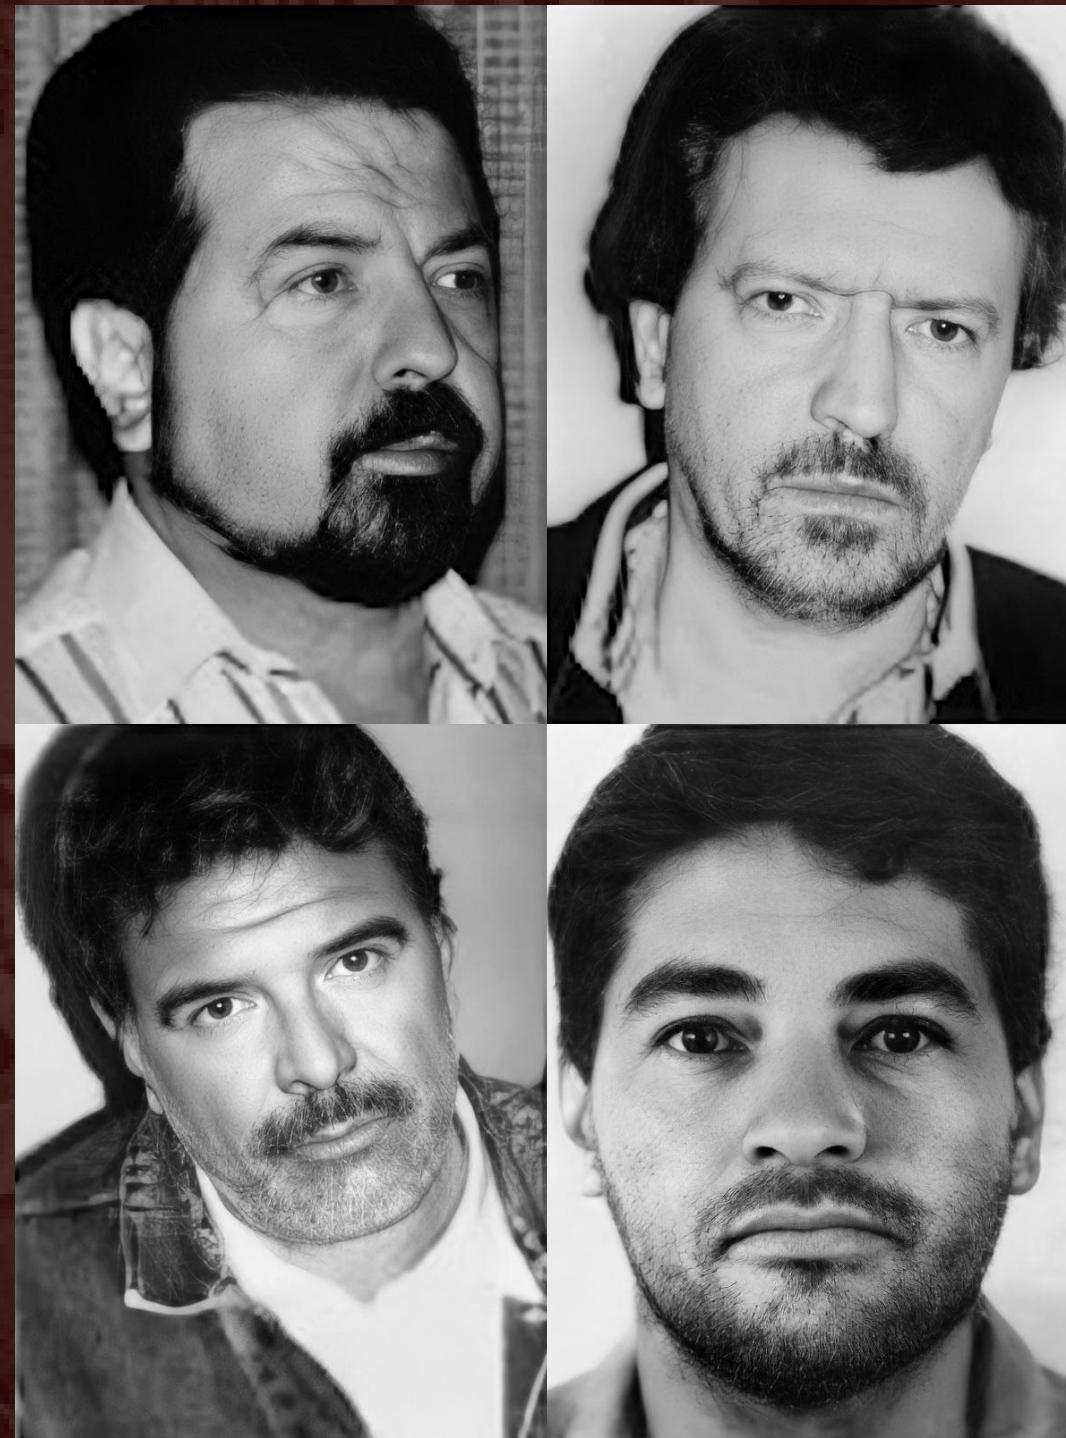

When Cali and Medellín went to war, Colombia became a battlefield.

The Medellín Cartel unleashed a wave of terror - bombings of banks, police stations, and even commercial airliners. Car bombs ripped through Bogotá and Medellín, leaving cities in flames. In retaliation, the Cali Cartel struck back with assassinations and targeted attacks, escalating the violence into a nationwide nightmare.

Ordinary life was shattered as fear ruled the streets
- an entire generation grew up under the shadow of explosions, gunfire, and grief.

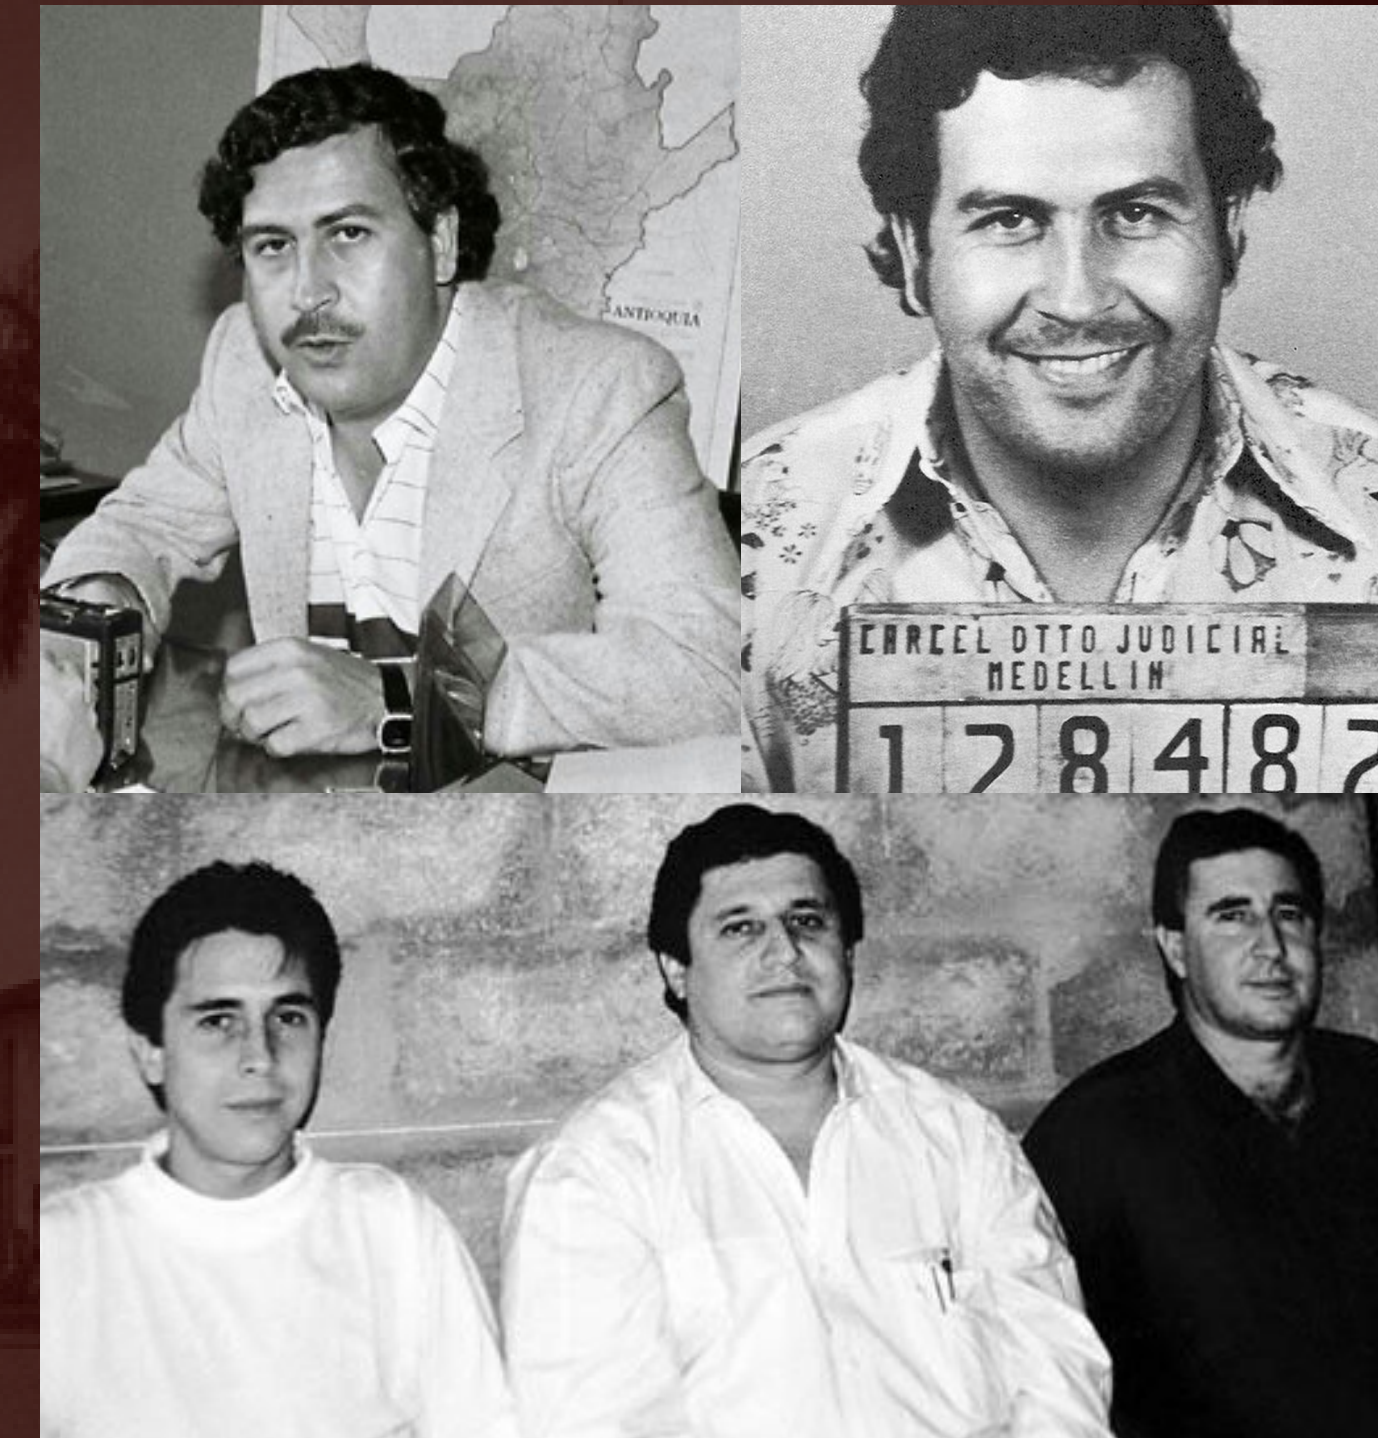

What Happened Back Then.

Cali Cartel.

The Cali Cartel rose as a powerful, calculated rival to Escobar's Medellín empire. Known as the "Gentlemen of Cali," they favored strategy over chaos - building vast cocaine routes through stealth, bribery, and control of institutions. Behind their polished image, however, lay a ruthless machine willing to eliminate anyone who stood in their way.

Medellin Cartel.

Led by Pablo Escobar, the Medellín Cartel ruled through raw terror. Car bombs, assassinations, and open war against the Colombian state made Escobar the most feared man in the world. Their empire thrived on violence and intimidation, leaving cities under siege and a nation caught in the crossfire.

William and Sebastian face to face.

Two names once tied to the most feared cartels in history now share the same stage.

William Rodríguez Abadía and Sebastián Marroquín, sons of Cali and Medellín, step out of the shadows of violence to tell their story - not of rivalry, but of survival, reconciliation, and hope. For the first time, audiences will witness an unscripted encounter between men who carried the weight of their fathers' legacies, and chose peace over vengeance.

Cali vs Medellín.

From Terror to Hope - The Untold Story of the Sons Who Chose Peace.

- Hosted by Michael Franzese - former New York Mafia boss turned global speaker
- Intimate, raw, and unscripted dialogue
- Never-before-heard stories, perspectives and insights
- Hear about the amazing initiatives that have come from their experiences

William Rodríguez.

Then.

Before his father's arrest, William Rodríguez Abadía lived a life shielded from the inner workings of the Cali Cartel, focused on building a future outside the shadows of organized crime. But when Miguel Rodríguez Orejuela was captured, everything changed. Thrust into a world of violence and power struggles, William was forced to step in, becoming one of the last to hold the reins during the bloody war with Medellín.

Now.

William, once tied to the Cartel by birth, has transformed his life into one of purpose and peace. As an author and peace ambassador, he speaks openly about fear, survival, and reconciliation, using his story to show that even from a past shaped by violence, a message of hope can emerge.

Sebastian Marroquín.

Then.

As Pablo Escobar's son, Sebastián Marroquín grew up inside the chaos of the Medellín Cartel. His childhood was marked by hiding, fear, and the constant threat of violence that surrounded his family.

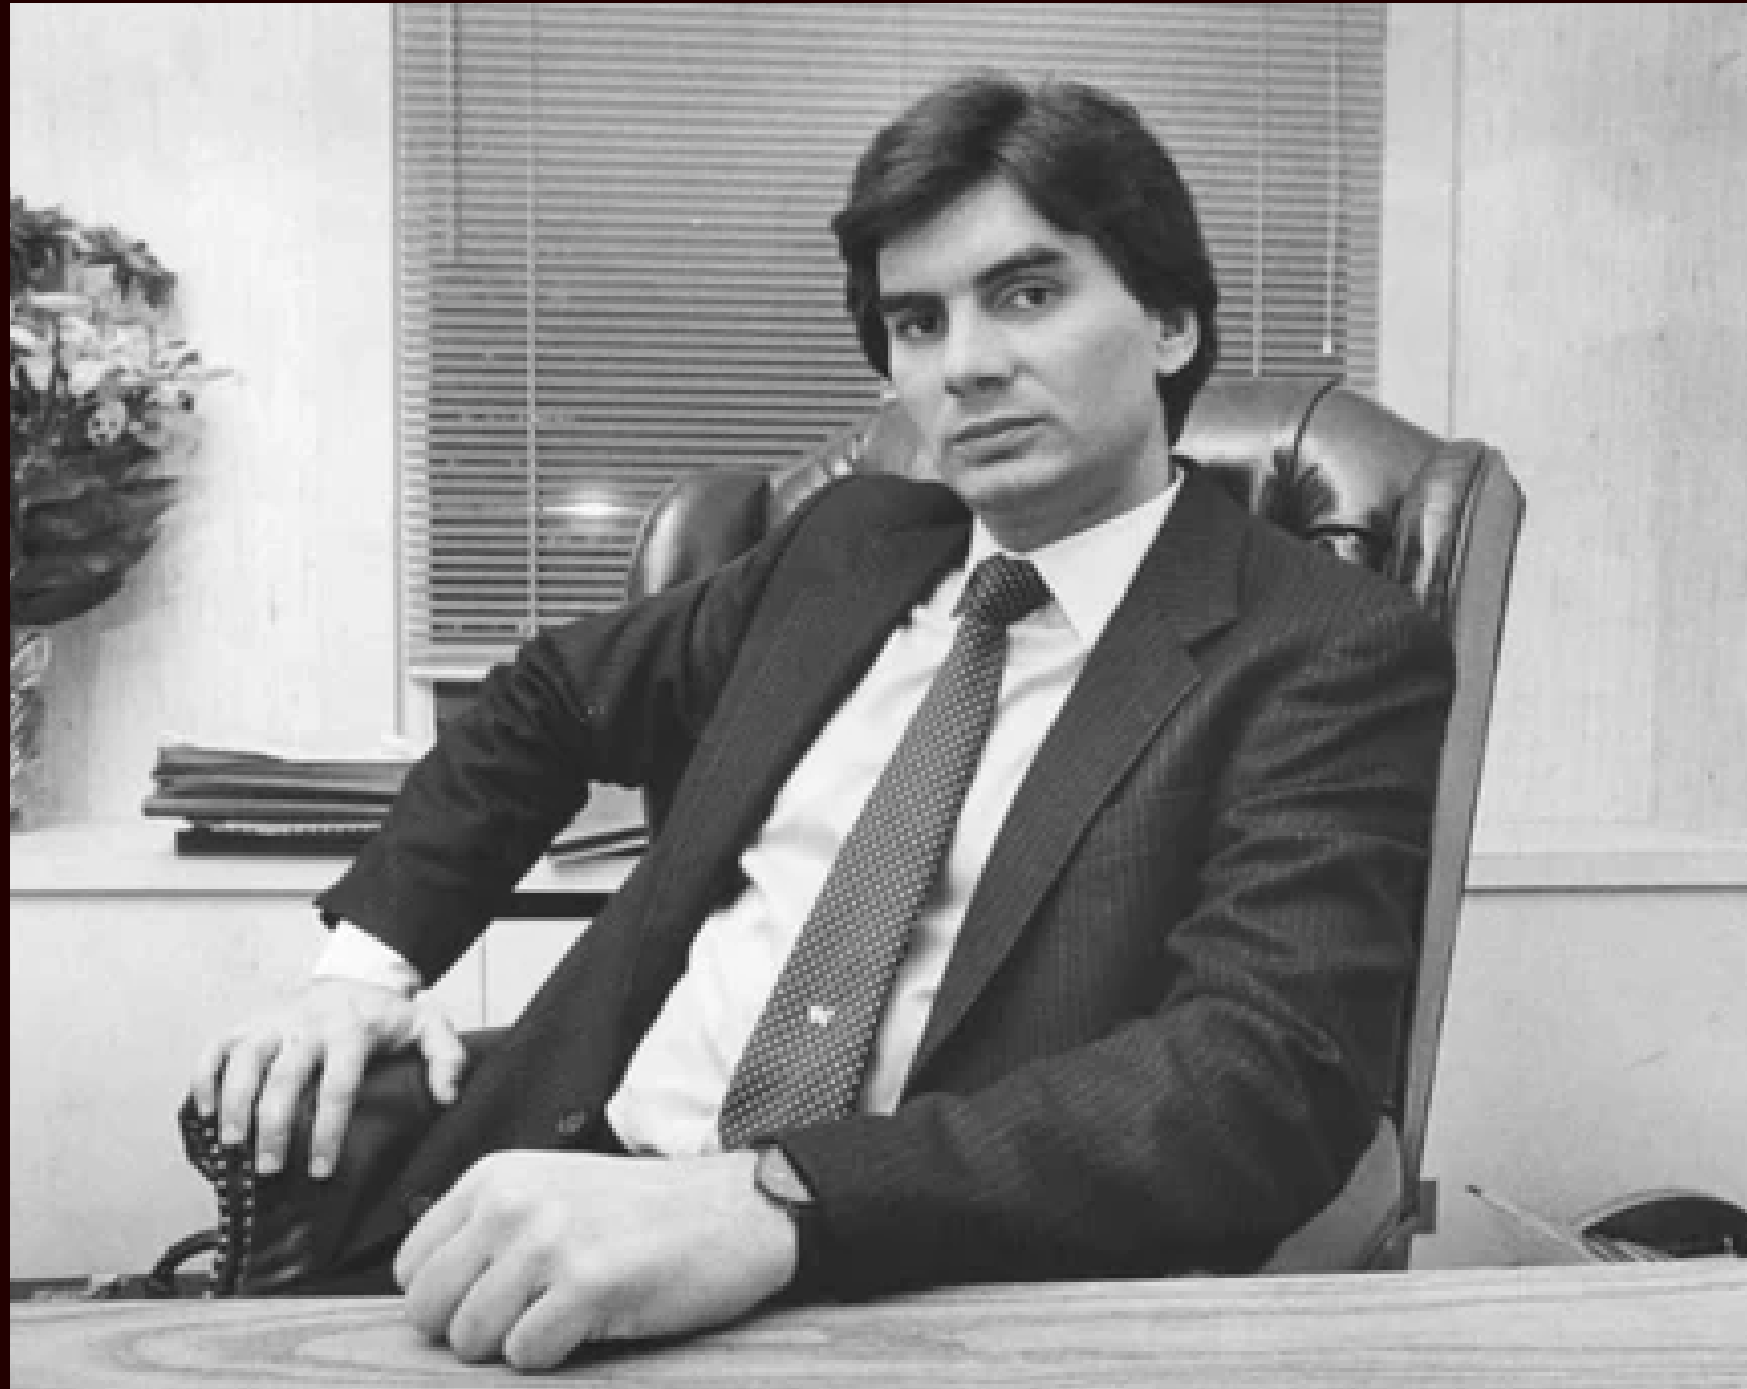

Now.

Sebastián has built a life far from his father's shadow. As an architect and peace advocate, he shares his journey from the heart of the Medellín Cartel's legacy to a voice for reconciliation and healing, proving it's possible to turn a past of violence into a future of hope.

How Michael Got Involved...

Then.

As consigliere of the Colombo crime family, Michael Franzese was a trusted strategist at the Mafia's core. He masterminded the notorious gasoline tax racket, blending street loyalty with boardroom intelligence - a voice of counsel and power in an underworld built on blood and silence.

Now.

Today, Michael Franzese uses his past to shape a very different legacy. As an author and global speaker, he offers rare insight into organized crime while championing change, redemption, and peace. Hosting this evening, he returns to the role of mediator - guiding dialogue instead of conflict.

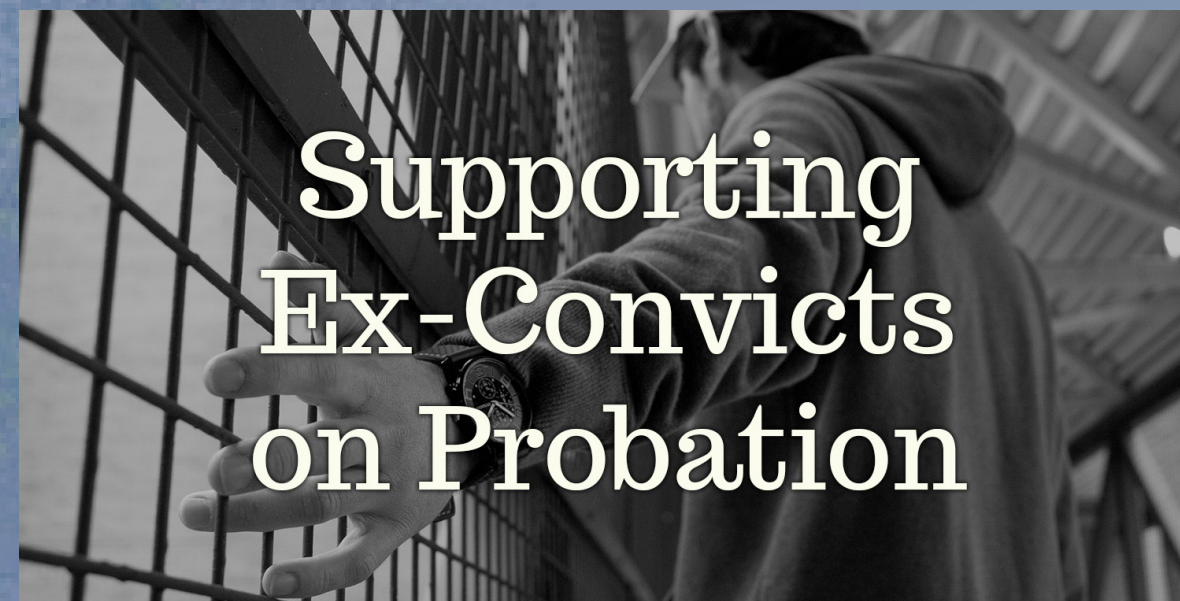

Why?

Though the world remains scarred by violence, the sons shaped by its past now fight for a different future.

William Rodríguez Abadía and Sebastián Marroquín are living proof that even the deepest rivalries can give way to understanding. Their story matters today because it doesn't end with survival - it evolves into action. From reconciliation to global peace initiatives, they now dedicate their lives to breaking cycles of violence and inspiring change across communities worldwide.
